----- NEW GAMEPLAY ELEMENTS -----

- Buffs and Debuffs Certain buffs and debuffs are added to characters. Depending on the state of play, buffs or debuffs will begin to rise.
- The Relationship with the Character At the start of the game, depending on your decisions, you can make your character likeable or dislikeable among the members of your party. As you progress in the game, your character's status as a friend or foe can change.
- The Roll-to-Win Effect A character who has been in the blue or red party will have an easier roll than one who has always been in the same party. This is due to the fact that the character who gets a red or blue party is dragged to the wrong direction and is used as an important item.
- Script Priority: Character Orders While in an important conversation or battle, the player's orders will be prioritized.
- Situation Control The controller can modify the order of the actions of certain party members when attacking or defending. For example, when on the front line during battle, the controller can pull the party into a specific direction (for example, to the front line) and use this as an opportunity to attack a certain enemy or use an element.
- Action Point and Status It is possible to assign an action point to an action to reduce the number of points used in that action. This can be used to lower the overall cost of your actions.
- The Theme of the Story In the Lands Between, there are several story items you can equip and will affect gameplay. Some items are automatically selected, and others you must summon and equip. (Gameplay elements now added)
